

JAMES JORDAN SCHOLARS LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE

The James Jordan Scholars Leadership Institute is a program designed by the West Des Moines Historical Society for metro area high school juniors. The Institute honors the life of James Jordan, a leader in business, agriculture, politics, insurance, transportation, and civil rights. Jordan's contributions in these areas laid the foundation for the vibrant economic, political, and social environment that exists today throughout Central Iowa.

What are the objectives of the James Jordan Scholars Leadership Institute?

- Educate young Central Iowans about the significant history of the area and the leadership as exemplified by James Jordan, a founding father of Greater Des Moines. .
- Help potential young leaders in the area understand the important role of community service and the nature of leadership.
- In a series of monthly on-site sessions, learn from and network with current community leaders in a civil rights and social justice, transportation, education, banking, insurance, government, agriculture, and major sectors of Iowa's economy today about the current challenges the metro area faces as well as the future.
- Provide a series of experiences for a selected group of Iowa students that engages, motivates, and inspires them to become active participants in creating the future of an Iowa that is increasingly diverse, both racially and culturally.
